New Basis of Rates To Be Asked by Traction Company.

Petition of the Georgia Power company to charge 10 cents for cash street car fares and 25 cents for three tickets, will be filed today with the Georgia public service commission according to reports at the state capitol Monday.

Preston S. Arkwright, president of the company, declined Monday night to discuss the matter, but persistent reports backed by claims of the traction company in the past several months that the company actually is losing money in operation of electric railway transportation in Atlanta gave credence to the rumors.

Rates at the present time are seven cents for cash fares and three tickets for 20 cents. This revision in the scale of charges would place the traction concern on a self-sustaining basis, it is claimed, and would permit an earning of 8 per cent on the investment, which is permitted under the state laws.

HITS BOLSHEVISMAmerican Ambassador to France Turns Memorial Address Into Indictment of Bolshevism.

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, May 30.—The memorial day observance in Paris took a surprising turn this afternoon when Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, speaking over the graves of 1,500 Yanks left behind in Suresnes cemetery, launched a violent attack on bolshevism.

Turning from his traditional eulogy of the war dead, the ambassador said:

"I insist that it is not incumbent on us Americans who fought so many years in the war for the purpose of securing for ourselves the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, to sit quietly while a band of men who made themselves by hook or crook masters of a country, attempt to inject fatal poison into our entire society."

The ambassador spoke with great feeling, injecting bitter adjectives into the milder advance of his speech.

Gen. John J. Pershing, General Nimitz, former minister to France, and the great throng of French and American notables gasped at the realization of Mr. Herrick's intent to turn the ceremony into an indictment of sovietism.

Mr. Herrick furthered this imposition when at the end of his immersion speech he continued beyond his written discourse and made a plea that "France and Europe as a whole stand with the Americans in their attempts to protect their cherished institutions against attack from without."NORWAY ASSUMES

ON PARADE ROUTEMemorial Day Celebration

Matinee Crowd Caught in Fascist Riot.

Jamaica, N. Y., May 30.—(United News)—Fifteen hundred klansmen, including 500 women, successfully battered their way through a cordon of 110 policemen into the Queens Memorial day parade Monday, and held their position along a four-mile march in spite of successive attacks by police and hostile crowds.

Stones, eggs and fruit were hurled at the robed marchers by the packed thousands along the way. The general aim was bad, however, and spectators on opposite sides of the streets and policemen bore the brunt of the barrage.

Appears in Regalia.

The trouble started when the klansmen appeared in their regalia prepared to march in the parade. Police Inspector Harley claimed that the klansmen had promised to march without robes or their flaming cross.

When klansmen attempted to swing into Jamaica avenue to take their place in the parade, Inspector Harley ordered his platoon of 110 men to bar the way. The police formed a barrier across the path of the robed marchers. Without hesitation, the Klan band struck "Forward Christian Soldiers" and headed by a Baptist minister, Rev. E. A. Williams, the klansmen forced their way through the lines of police.

As the inspector had instructed his men not to use their clubs, fists served instead. A near riot ensued for a few minutes. Rocks and stones, fists cracked and blood spattered, but there were no casualties. Like a white torrent the robed marchers poured through the collapsing line of blue-coats.

Then the crowd joined in with varied amusement. The leader of the march was a succession of broomsticks, with the police augmented by more and more reserves, attempting to stem the white tide by placing automobile across its path. At one point a klansman on horseback forced his mount to leap over a barreling auto. His followers marched around the obstruction.

Rotten Eggs Found.

A crate of rotten eggs and a crate of spoiled fruit was discovered on a trestle under which the Klan was to have marched. The discovery came before the Klan's arrival at the trestle.

At the approach to the Memorial day parade the police assumed a final stand, but the Klan again broke through, and after passing the reviewing stand, marched two blocks more, and then dispersed. Their robes were torn and soiled, faces bruised and scratched.

They were arrested during the disorders. One of them, John E. Kipt, an acknowledged Klansman, was charged with felonious assault for striking Sergeant Thomas Lockwood and Patrolman William O'Neil. The five others were charged with disorderly conduct.

The Knights of Columbus, originally scheduled to participate in the parade, turned their backs on the Klan.

First came a proud bridle dog trotting ahead of four strutting drum majors and rustling in their plumes. Following, dressing their ranks in plumes and following the cheering stands and forming a color guard. Next marched a company of national guard followed by blue clad sailors. The military marched ahead of a 1,500-piece band drawn from points in every section of the city.

3 ACCIDENT VICTIMS RETURN TO HOSPITAL

Dismissed from the emergency clinic of Grady hospital a week ago as slightly injured, three victims of accidents were back in the hospital Monday receiving treatment for fractures of the skull and brain concussion. Those receiving treatment are: E. G. Dobbs, 31, of 592 Emerson street, S. W., fracture of the skull; C. M. Amis, 42, of the Adair hotel, fracture of the skull and brain concussion, and Mrs. Bertha Brown, of 521 Peachtree street, concussion of the brain.

Dobbs received his injuries on May 21 on East Baker street between Peachtree and Peachtree, when he was struck in the head with a brick by a negro. On Saturday, Dobbs was brought back to the hospital suffering from pains in the head, and x-ray pictures revealed the fact that he had a fracture of the skull.

Amis was struck down at Spring and Cain streets on Wednesday afternoon by an automobile while walking to his office. The records of the emergency clinic Monday revealed that he was treated for intoxication and dismissed. X-ray pictures taken on his return to the hospital Monday day following a collapse while working, revealed that he has a fracture of the skull, while physicians also said that he had a concussion.

Mrs. Brown was riding with her husband, H. S. Brown, on Campbell road on May 21, when the car door suddenly flew open and she fell from the machine while it was making about 30 miles an hour. She was dismissed from the Grady hospital Monday afternoon, having been given treatment for "several bruises and skinned places on shoulder, knees and elbow," according to records at the clinic. She was brought back to the hospital several days ago on complaint of pains in the head, and examination revealed that she had a fracture of the skull.

Physicians of high standing, when questioned by The Constitution Monday, stated that it was not unusual for emergency examinations to fail to disclose fractures of the skull and concussions of the brain, and that not infrequently injuries of this type remain undiscovered after several days, or more.

Abandons Swedish Trip.
"Lindy" definitely told the Tribune Press Service correspondent this morning that he reluctantly was forced to abandon all hope of flying to Stockholm or elsewhere in Europe "as quickly as possible." Captain Lindbergh finally tactfully said that his definitive departure will not be announced until the arrival of Mr. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Airplane factory in San Diego, who is aboard the Mauretania and who will conduct the negotiations.

Meanwhile, the "committee" had considered the exploration of the body without finding the mob's quarry. Its announcement to this effect failed to quiet the besiegers.

Followed by his plans at noon, "Lindy" told me:

"Personally, I prefer to fly back to New York than to go by boat, but there is no advantage of repeating the flight under the same conditions as this already has been accomplished. If the flight is repeated it should be made in a more advanced airplane than the original was intended. Yes, it is possible to fly from San Francisco to Tokyo. No place in the world is inaccessible to an aeroplane if the flight is properly arranged."

Visits King Today.

When asked about the clothes he had purchased and what he intends to wear at his presentation to King George tomorrow, Lindy waved the question aside.

"That does not matter. I am not setting styles," he said.

Tonight Lindy was guest at the American Newspaper Correspondents Association Savoy hotel dinner, beginning at 7 o'clock, in order to give Mr. Houghlin a chance to stay overnight in Southampton tonight, where he will board the Leviathan sailing for America tomorrow. Mr. Houghlin is going to confer with President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg regarding the naval conference in Geneva next month.

A feature of today's visit was Lindy's attendance of the memorial day services at St. Martin's church, alongside the Duke of York, across the square from the houses of parliament. The blind pilot and Ambassador Houghton, with an official party, arrived at the church in limousines promptly at 1 o'clock, as the service's started, and Lindy, sitting in the front pew, immediately joined in singing of the national anthem with the congregation.

The Yank gazed curiously around the ancient church with its time-blackened masonry, walls studded with commemorative plaques to dead heroes of other days, and maggoty wood carving and sculptured busts, and priceless large glass windows, depicting scriptural scenes with the same fidelity as oil paintings.

Honors Unknown Soldier.
After viewing the embassies adjacent with "Lindy" walking along just behind his attendants and carrying a huge wreath, walked across the lawn to Westminster Abbey, where the hero placed the flowers on the plaque floor marking the grave of Great Britain's unknown warrior. He stood in pensile silence for a few moments, with head bowed, then turned and then proceeded to the vestry and signed the Golden Book.

Immediately after an early breakfast "Lindy" hopped into an automobile and was whirled to Croydon to take another look at his ship. He learned that the minor damages done by the mob yesterday are easily repaired.

Launches at Embassy.
Then he had luncheon at the embassy, where Mr. Houghton had forty guests, including Sir Austin Chamberlain, British foreign secretary; Lord Stamford, and the Duke of Atholl; Hon. Lee W. W. Murphy; Mrs. Frank King, Twigg, Cheshire; Mrs. A. J. Nitzeck, Blue Ridge; Mrs. B. W. Sipe, Murphy; Mrs. O. L. Anderson, Hayesville; and Miss H. Davidson, Cleveland, and J. W. Foster, Rome.

Banquet at Murphy.
The main feature of the banquet at Murphy was a plan to enlarge the scope of road and recreation work to cover all mountain counties within the Dixie Scenic circle in five states.

The plans of the Rome Chamber of Commerce for a trunk-line highway between Birmingham and Asheville will also be discussed.

The first road project of the Na-coochee-Hiawassee Road and Recreation association continues to be of primary importance to this organization and the motocade of June 2 will travel this scenic route from out-of-town. The trip will be made up the Hiawassee river valley to Hayesville and Hiawassee,
through Union Gap to the Blue Ridge divide and down the Na-coochee valley to Roberttown and Helen,
then on to Cleveland and up to Neel gap
over the Appalachian Scenic highway.

It is the hope of the association of the scenic road between Helen
and Hiawassee, as originally planned
by the Road and Recreation association
some five years ago, will give a remarkable mountain loop from Atlanta
through Dahlonega, Neel Gap,
Blairsville, Union Gap, Cleveland,
Hiawassee, Buford, Lawrenceville, Stone Mountain and back to Atlanta.

There is a Georgia line under construction now on state route No. 2, between Blairsville and Hiawassee, which, when completed in the fall,
will shorten the loop from Atlanta
through Dahlonega, Neel Gap,
Blairsville, Union Gap, Cleveland,
Hiawassee, Buford, Lawrenceville,
Stone Mountain and back to Atlanta.

Construction will also begin this summer on the link of state route No. 2 from Blairsville west to the Fannin county line, to meet the paved section of state route No. 2, which will give another important link from Atlanta into north central Georgia. Progress is being made on construction between Blue Ridge and Ellijay, and Ellijay to Calhoun and Rome so that another loop into northwest Georgia will be opened within the next two years.

Construction will be completed in the fall, which will shorten the loop from Atlanta through Dahlonega and Blairsville and between Cleveland and Gainesville are also promising good things to link up with the paving soon to be completed between Buford and Gainesville and Lawrenceville and Atlanta.

Road Taken Over.

The United States forest service has taken over the road between Helen and Blairsville toward Hiawassee

since the purchase of 100,000 acres of forest land in White and Lumpkin counties by the federal government.

These national forest areas in Georgia will soon total 500,000 acres and plans have been made to establish a supervisor's headquarters at Gainesville, for the closer administration of the proposed "Chattahoochee National Forest."

Georgia state forestry officials will attend the meeting at Murphy and remain for several days inspection on the Vogel Forest park near Neel gap, which features a series of natural features and a protective protection work will be planned on these strategic points at the headwaters of the

Chattahoochee, Tennessee and Sava-nannah rivers.

Public camping facilities have already been provided in Vogel park and for the celebration on June 2, several long tables and many cozy sets have been constructed by local citizens who have also cleared out dead logs and timber for the occasion and provided adequate parking space, etc.

out-of-town. The trip will be made up the Hiawassee
river valley to Hayesville and Hiawassee,
through Union Gap to the Blue Ridge divide and down the Na-
coochee valley to Roberttown and Helen,
then on to Cleveland and up to Neel gap
over the Appalachian Scenic highway.

It is the hope of the association
of the scenic road between Helen
and Hiawassee, as originally planned
by the Road and Recreation association
some five years ago, will give a remarkable mountain loop from Atlanta
through Dahlonega, Neel Gap,
Blairsville, Union Gap, Cleveland,
Hiawassee, Buford, Lawrenceville, Stone Mountain and back
to Atlanta.

LIST OF STORM DEAD GROWS IN 3 STATES

storms have inundated 17 counties to a depth of one to three feet in some of the affected areas.

Trains Delayed.

The storm spent its fury over eastern Kentucky and Tennessee and southwest Virginia although rains fell in practically all sections of Virginia and North Carolina during the night. Highways in the stricken sections were covered with from two to three feet of water and railroad communication was delayed by heavy landslides and collection of debris.

Record stages on rivers and smaller streams were recorded today and the waters caused loss of thousands of dollars in property, damage to homes, business houses, crops, highways and live stock. Hail caused serious injury to wheat and tobacco crops and in some sections virtually destroyed the growth. Over 600 houses are reported down.

FLOW DIMINISHES

New Orleans, May 30.—P—With more than 350 square miles of the "sugar bowl" parishes already covered, the flow from the McRae crenshaw in the east bank levees of the Atchafalaya river was diminishing tonight and a sandbar settled outside the opening at McRae crenshaw is approximately 120 miles northwest of New Orleans, and on the west side of the river.

The New Orleans weather bureau reported that changes in the water level in Pointe Coupee parish indicated that the flow from the river was decreasing and mountain flood waters set in on the first floor or more days following the break in the dam.

On the opposite side of the Atchafalaya, a restless lake stretched across the length of the basin, extending far up across Bayou des Glaises into the Tensas basin. Water was rising steadily along the lower extremities of the lake and it made its final dash for the Gulf of Mexico.

At the same time, drainage of the water into the Atchafalaya basin gradually was reducing the flood levels in the Tensas basin, where 13 northeastern Louisiana parishes have been inundated. The fall was slow, however, since the breaks in the main Mississippi levees at Cabin Teles and Winter Quarters continued to feed water into the northeastern corner of the basin, more than 100 miles north of Baton Rouge.

Gradual recession of the waters, however, had brought farmers to drying ridges in Morehouse, Ouachita, east and west Carroll and Franklin parishes, along the upper and western edges of the Atchafalaya basin. Local committees in Catahoula, Tensas and Concordia parishes, in the heart of the Tensas basin, also were being supplied with seed for use as soon as planting might be started.

in the Memorial Day parade was guarded by police to avert disorder.

The men killed were Joseph Carisi and Nicholas Amoroso. They were on their way to join the parade with 20 comrades when they were attacked at 18th street and Third avenue. Amoroso was shot through the heart and Carisi was stabbed to death.

Police expressed the opinion that the assailants had intended to kill the leaders of the fascist group and that the bullets were meant especially for Giacomo Caldora, president of the organization in New York, with whom they were on their way to join the parade.

After the parade the black shirts went to the headquarters of the organization in New York with the intent to mourn the loss of Carisi and Amoroso. One of their number who had remained at the street door, Michael Gioria, an invalid world war veteran, was attacked by three men.

Uses His Whip.

One of Gioria's hands was partly shot off in the war, but with the other he laid about him with a whip to drive off the black shirts and called for help. The black shirts streamed out armed with clubs and whips, and Gioria's assailants fled.

The chase led across Times Square and theater matinee crowds ran for cover as the black shirted mob tore through the traffic. The fugitives escaped in the crowds. Police forces were called to the scene.

At the same time, drainage of the

Sometimes when we recall the old time set up in the grocery stores we are not surprised at the progress made of stores since the A&P. It seems like only a few years when practically everything was bulk goods and the displays were so many it was difficult for a customer to make her way from the front door to the rear of the store.

The A&P stores were one of the first pioneer companies to realize the necessity of advertising and sanitary conditions in dealing in foodstuffs. Once a week even the canned goods and bottled goods are wiped off carefully. Shelves are cleaned and displays of merchandise are always protected. Naturally the public appreciates the very evident importance of this phase of merchandising.

RODEO PROMOTER GETS RELEASE FROM TOWER

Chick Hannan, arena manager for the Rodeo show at Lakewood park last week, who was confined in Fulton county Tower for several days on warrants sworn out against him, was released from custody Monday on an order issued by Judge Luther Z. Rosser, of municipal court.

The order for Hannan's release was issued after the warrants had been withdrawn and the matter squashed.

STEINWAY

The Instrument of the Immortals

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO . . . when the late Mark Blumenberg was editor of the Musical Courier Extra of New York he paid tribute to the STEINWAY in these words:

"It is a misnomer to call the STEINWAY 'a piano' . . . it should be called 'the STEINWAY.' There are so many pianos made . . . good, bad and indifferent . . . that the STEINWAY is in a class by itself."

TODAY . . . William Geppert, present editor of the Courier, expresses the same sentiments, editorially, as follows:

"Think of a Steinway; not of a mere piano! Many years ago began that marvelous development of its higher qualities that have carried it so far into the greater realm of esthetics; to that astonishing development of tone that is exclusively STEINWAY—now the standard of all musical-instrument endeavor. Four generations of STEINWAYS have succeeded the founder of the house, each in turn carrying precept and tradition further and further on. Today eight of this fourth generation are coaching the fifth line of STEINWAYS for their life work. In all art and effort there is no parallel to this great, constant progression of this genealogy and genius—and neither is there parallel to your opportunity to take from it, at a trifling cost, the golden fruit of these seventy-five years of uninterrupted advancement."

And not only is the endorsement of such noted authorities on musical subjects convincing proof of the superiority of the STEINWAY . . . but the greatest pianists, singers and violinists of the present generation likewise endorse, applaud and use the STEINWAY . . . "The Instrument of the Immortals."

PARK CITIZENS ISSUE STATEMENT ON PONIES

Declaring that every complaining resident on Park avenue is a friend to the kiddies and ponies, and the objection is that the track is located where it is, and the question placed, and all that ask is that the track be placed elsewhere than immediately in front of the residences which face the park. There is ample space on the 140 acres of park ground for a proper location of the track so that the children can enjoy the ponies without constraint and without causing discomfort to the property owners.

"Why did the park board use better discretion in the location of the track in Piedmont park? No one objects to the ponies in Piedmont park, and we do not, because the location is such that the ponies without constraint and without causing discomfort to the property owners.

"Considerable publicity has been given to the 'Pony-Kiddy' situation in Grant park, and I desire to make a brief statement in behalf of the complaining citizens who live on the one hundred yards or so from in front street facing the park," Mr. Ewing said.

"The most singular achievement of his artistic skill resulted in a pair of walking canes carved from discarded billiard cues with a pocket knife. Spending on the average of three hours a day this chess master of the cue stick, Mr. Morgan, has five months to complete. The sticks are decorated with 266 minute figures, readily recognizable and ranging from Eve in the garden of Eden to reproductions of 'Mutt and Jeff' and Charlie Chaplin.

An admirer of one of the canes in Miami recently appraised it at $1,000.

An attractive feature of Philibosian's service to out-of-town customers is the personal attention given the individual customer.

For instance, during the last few months the firm has furnished homes to the South. Almost invariably after the prospectus is signed and signed his or her intention of buying furnishings, the firm sent, absolutely free of charge, an interior decorator to the home and this expert on furnishings offered invaluable suggestions, not only in the matter of what to select, but in the arrangement of the furnishings in the home. Of course this service applies to the more extensive purchases.

The number of complimentary appetizers the firm has received from satisfied customers indicates that this expert service is appreciated and that it enabled the customer to secure more beautiful effects at less cost than was ever expected.

This personal service not only is offered to out-of-town buyers but to Atlanta residents as well. Stephen Philibosian, Inc., will be glad to render similar service to anyone planning the furnishing of a new home or the furnishing of an old one.

Realizes Boyhood Ambition In Carving Atlanta Skyline

Realizing a boyhood ambition to reproduce the skyline of Atlanta through his wood carving, the hobby of his life, C. N. Morgan was in Atlanta Monday to obtain a panoramic sketch of Atlanta for his model.

In his native home, at Cedartown Ga., Mr. Morgan discovered his latent talent for carving and to it he devoted many of his spare hours during the ten years he served as deputy and clerk of the superior court of Polk county.

The most singular achievement of his artistic skill resulted in a pair of walking canes carved from discarded billiard cues with a pocket knife.

SUNDAY AUTO CRASH VICTIMS ARE IMPROVING

Although not yet out of danger, the five persons injured Sunday night at Peachtree and Seventeenth streets in a collision between two automobiles, were showing considerable improvement Monday at local hospitals, according to reports.

J. W. McElvain, of Nisley Lake, horse trainer employed by Frank McElvain, Jr., and Frank Fleming, was the most seriously injured of the five, the conditions were reported to be much better Monday night, it was stated. Others injured in the crash were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, 844 Piedmont avenue, parents of the two seriously injured.

According to police reports, a car driven by H. H. Henderson, of 1962 Peachtree road, was sideswiped by Mr. McElvain's car, which later crashed into a car driven by Fulton Cluster, negro of 78 Horton street.

In the car with Cluster were three ladies, Mrs. Henry Middlecamp, Nellie Ward and Nettie Harris. They were all taken to Grady hospital, hardly shaken up and bruised but otherwise unharmed. Both cars in the crash were almost demolished.

AUDITOR STATE'S REPORT.

The report of State Auditor Sam J. State, to the governor, is one of the most notable documents ever submitted by a state department.

It is a striking tribute to the ability and to the efficiency of one of the most important officials of the state, and its merits the careful consideration of the general assembly.

The auditor of no state has ever made a better record and the remarkable efficiency of his work has abundantly justified the law creating this office.

Auditor State takes the very correct view that all state funds should be collected by one central authority, under one control, and that collecting and disbursing should be under two major departments only.

By the enforcement of these recommendations there can be an enormous saving to the state which is now practically wasted in overlapping, and in the lack of governmental system.

It is right also in the recommendation that oil inspection be divorced from the department of agriculture.

There are now 190 inspectors. By the substitution of the distillation test for the gravity test this number can be reduced to less than a dozen. Thereby the state can save fully $150,000 a year in entirely useless and unnecessary salaries.

There has never been any good reason for the agricultural department to have charge of oil inspection.

The state imposes 4 cents a gallon gasoline tax which amounts to approximately $6,000,000 a year. One-half a cent of that gross tax is set aside for "inspection." When the army of inspectors are paid off the remainder is transferred by the agricultural department to the general fund.

That is wrong.

The gasoline tax should take care of the necessary inspection expenses, reduced to a sensible basis, and the remainder should go to the road fund. It would increase this fund fully half a million dollars a year.

The auditor makes a good suggestion as to a reorganization of the state's fiscal and administrative system. He declares that all activities can be grouped into twelve to fourteen major departments.

The truth is the services of government could be made more extensive and more generally helpful if there was even a greater degree of coordination than the auditor has suggested.

Too many departments not only create bureau government, which is always objectionable, but permit of so many conflicts of authority, and overlapping of effort, that real services to the people are curtailed rather than enlarged.

As the auditor further very correctly suggests, there should be a modern executive budget law that has teeth.

The present budget arrangement is spineless and of no real service. The committee meets three or four days every two years, looks over the supply list, then at anticipated incomes, and makes indefinite recommendations to the assembly. The law should require the budgeting of all departments and institutions in the light of actual requirements, and then the readjustment and the proper distribution of taxes to meet the proposed expenditures.

Of course the state should have a centralized system of purchasing, and a board of control could not only undertake this, but also the budgeting so that there could be complete coordination.

The auditor has entered extensively into a discussion of these problems in a clear, thoughtful and wise way. Georgia has less income than is necessary to meet normal demands. The institutions are not properly maintained. There is never a dollar available for extensions and improvements.

The problem of revising the tax laws so as to increase the state's annual income without increasing the rates, but by better distribution, is an acute one.

The problem of saving money by wise economies, and by coordination of services, is equally as acute, and that is the problem the auditor has dealt with in a most intelligent, commendatory manner.

Thorough Mobilization.

French women will be added to the tableau of horror during the next war, says Candide, the great literary master. This in comment on the new military laws, which provide that every living creature, "without distinction of age or sex" is to be mobilized during the next conflict. By such far-reaching plans, the French hope to make war absolutely impossible for psychological reasons. What these psychological reasons are, nobody has explained, but it may be that by placing it within reach of everybody, it will be so common and unworthy a thing that nobody will want anything to do with it, so much so that little boys will even refuse to play as soldiers. On the same principle as the old saying that nobody would greatly care for money if it rained golden $10 pieces. It's a subtle psychology. But whether it will affect others but Frenchmen also, remains a question.

Human Errors.

The same situation existed in Americus Sunday that exists everywhere when the enforcement of "blue laws" is attempted—that is a contradiction and an inconsistency that make the whole thing ridiculous.

No ice could be delivered in Americus Sunday, and yet the day was intensely warm.

No ice cream or soft drinks were sold. And yet the rates were permitted to open, and coffee and iced tea were served. What consistency is there in that?

It simply forced the small ice consumers to go to greater expense than they otherwise would in order to get cool drinks which could only come from the cafes.

It kept people in their homes who did not have proper supplies of gasoline.

It kept hotel guests in their rooms. Some of them, perhaps, had the usual "parties" that are always promoted by "blue Sunday" foolishness.

It is all fundamentally wrong. Such attempted enforcement of sumptuary rulings are inconsistent and contradictory creating a spirit of reckless disregard for law that is not only harmful but full of personal peril.

Law enforcement, good manners and good morals, are best served by liberality and consistency, and by a proper regard for the conventions and the proprieties without any foolishness.

Can-Can Tabarin.

The must have been some hints and rumblings of prohibition activity even in the distant days of the thirteenth century and that in the land of France, for scanning the pages of a muddled parchment in the Bibliothèque National Iaschek, I came upon a muckish writer, who had "traveled widely" having been to Rome and Cadiz on one occasion. Our laborious translation of the old script showed that the thirteenth century clerk maintained that good wine makes good, good manners cause good thoughts, good manners cause good works, good works carry a man to heaven, ergo, good wine carrieth a man to heaven?

It kept hotel guests in their rooms. Some of them, perhaps, had the usual "parties" that are always promoted by "blue Sunday" foolishness.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

The business review of the sixth district federal reserve bank, issued Monday, shows that in the southeastern states Atlanta led in department store sales in April with a net increase of 20.1 per cent over April, 1926, and with a net increase of 13 per cent during the first four months of the year.

This is a marvelous record, and not only shows the prosperity of Atlanta, but accentuates Atlanta's position as the retail center of the southeast.

There is no better trade barometer than the businesses of department stores. They are the most democratic of all mercantile institutions, catering to all classes and groups of citizens. They sell largely on a cash basis. They reflect, therefore, the status of circulating money.

If department stores show a loss in business there is a good reason for knowing that business conditions generally are below normal. If they show a gain in business, as so forcibly shown in Atlanta at the present time, then there is but one answer. That is that conditions are good, that circulation is above normal, that prosperity is general.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt predicts that women will soon be wearing pants. They will wish in April, when they undress in an upper Pullman berth.

The Seattle man who has succeeded in trisection of all angles, a problem that has baffled mathematicians for all time, may use his discovery in solving the eternal triangle.

Tampa is one Florida city that can still talk in millions, for its cigar output is in excess of that amount daily.

The Chinese war has simmered down to such a low ebb that newspaper correspondents have to hire guides to lead them to the centers of activity.

Whenever graft is charged the public gets the bill for it.

Over 1,000 manuscripts were submitted in the contest conducted by the National Federation of Music Clubs for successor to the national anthem, none of which was acceptable. There is nothing to excel "Dixie."

The auditor has entered extensively into a discussion of these problems in a clear, thoughtful and wise way. Georgia has less income than is necessary to meet normal demands. The institutions are not properly maintained. There is never a dollar available for extensions and improvements.

The problem of revising the tax laws so as to increase the state's annual income without increasing the rates, but by better distribution, is an acute one.

SUMTER'S "BLUE SUNDAY."

The "blue Sunday" edict of the Sumter county sheriff caused all kinds of inconveniences, and served no good purposes.

Those who wanted to play golf did so, but caddies were denied them.

In hotels the "bell hops" waited upon guests who tipped them, of course, as they always do.

But on the links a golfer had to carry his own sticks, chase his golf balls, and do all those sorts of things, held that a caddy was in the category of one "hired for pay."

How about the cook, the butler, the chauffeur?

The same situation existed in Americus Sunday that exists everywhere when the enforcement of "blue law" is attempted—that is a contradiction and an inconsistency that make the whole thing ridiculous.

TRIAL OF HAMMOND POSTPONED TO JUNE 8

Postponement until June 8 of the trial of Harold Hammond, alleged murderer, scheduled to get under way at 9 o'clock this morning before Judge Virlyn B. Moore in Fulton superior court, was won Monday with the announcement from Carl Lancaster head counsel that an agreement to this effect had been made with Solicitor General John A. Borkin.

Hammond, under indictment for the murder of Mrs. Lottie Bell Ingram and her 19-month-old son, Floyd, whose bodies were found in a bungalow in the Ingram home on Ashby street several months ago, his husband and father were his victim's mother and father.

For several weeks police sought Hammond. Following his arrest several neighbors of the Ingram family identified him as the stranger who had been seen in the vicinity of the Ingram home on the night of the murders and as the man who had been seen at the Ingram home. The identification was made during a "voice test" conducted under the supervision of city detectives.

The defendant has emphatically denied any connection with the slaying and declared that he was not in the vicinity of the Ingram home during the day of the murders.

Mrs. Ingram was beaten to death with a flatiron and the infant child was found strangled to death with a strip of clothes which was tightly wound around the neck.

Weekly Expert Review of English Cotton Industry

BY FREDERICK W. TATTERSALL.

Manchester, Eng., May 30.—All the traders in Manchester are having a very trying time. Raw cotton merchants have their difficulties and owing to the tightness of money they scarcely know which of their customers to trust. This anxiety is a reflex of the proposal from Liverpool that future oil contracts should be conducted on a cash basis. The suggestion has not yet been carried and it is doubtful whether the members of the Liverpool Cotton association will submit to the extent of 15 per cent this change in the rules and regulations. The oil companies in the market are worried by the depreciation in values and loan holders are scared by the large number of mills that are being compelled to go into liquidation or submit to a scheme of arrangement whereby all monies can be tied up for three years.

Minimum Yarn Prices.

A work of minimum prices for American yarns has now been experienced. So far the result has been the resistance of buyers to the higher rates. It is quite true that during the last few days several cases have been mentioned of spinners obtaining the minimum prices. The mills will not be compelled to do this, but the mills have gone to firms that are outside the association, the business being done at prices a little below the minimum. The directors of the Cotton Yarn association are confident of success and believe that the mills will give up two or three weeks. It is a question as to who can wait the longest, the producer or the consumer. In the meantime owing to more looms running out of work, the association

The Laundry Machinery Industry'

Serving one of this country's most rapidly expanding industries through the manufacture and sale of essential equipment.

Government census figures indicate that the laundry industry has increased over 500% in the last sixteen years or at the rate of over 30% per annum.

With direct relation to the remarkable expansion of the laundry industry, the sales and profits of the foremost laundry machinery companies have shown a steadily increasing trend.

Average credit losses of the larger laundry machinery companies for the last ten years are reported to be less than one quarter of one percent.

The character of their business is such that these companies are relatively free from inventory fluctuations.

The leading companies in this industry are all solidly entrenched and their history dates back twenty-five years or more.

We believe the securities of well-established companies in this rapidly expanding industry offer exceptionally attractive investment opportunities.

Specific investment suggestions will be furnished upon request.

Sophy Tancred's Husbands

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER.

INSTALLMENT XLIV.

Sophy. "Well, I'm surprised, now. I wonder?"
"Good morning," said Piers, with a diabolical and wholly unsmiling grin. "Just in time, Moppet. Would you like to come along to the perfume with me and see a bit of fun?"

"What for?" asked Willie, eyeing the parrot with distrustful suspicion. Piers tapped the "Rope ladder," he said, his grin widening until it showed two gold crowns that ordinarily were not exposed. "Burglars got into the house last night and left this behind as a souvenir. I'm just going to report it."

"Good God!" Willie exclaimed, aghast at what he had heard. "I wonder, I say, how do you know? I mean to say, they wouldn't be burglars unless they took something."

"Of course they wouldn't. I, they hadn't made the haul, I'd have something else to think about, wouldn't I? But, now, Piers had longed for a ladder. In the morning, the ladder was sweating. "They lagged some money and a few odds and ends, and were trying the safe in my wife's bedroom when something must have happened to frighten 'em off. O, yes, and they packed up most of the plate."

"Well, I'm bluffed," said Willie. "And you're going to the police?"

"What would I do?"
"About what?"

"About what?"

"What about frightening the police?"
"She was still in bed when I left home," Piers enlightened him. "She doesn't know we found this ladder and signs of people getting over the wall. There must have been two of them, I think."

Willie tried a sanguine attempt to collect his wits. "There was the man who came printed large on that bunch, embossed brown paper covering. Didn't Sophy look in the post-lid of that?"

Answering the unspoken question, Piers nodded with grim satisfaction. "O, yes, I've got them now," he said. "Fellow told me he'd sold this to me—me—me—me—in order to order for you. That's why I thought you might like to come along to the prefecture with me."

Piers hadn't possessed something on his own account requiring confinement, but Willie Moppet. Nothing could have pleased him better than to send that foolish young blackmailer to jail on such an impulsive charge as burglary. In fact, he wasn't at all uncertain that Willie hadn't done the thing. Moppet might be in the house with Claire of the lace shop. Anyway, Moppet was a fellow who had boasted faded antiques on him, on the strength of having caught him on one occasion at Callo's with the little Swiss. Regularly planned, last night's job must have been. He's being at the Dorcas, too, and going off to the casinodrome afterwards.

But, where O, where did Sophy come into this plot? If Moppet was a burglar he couldn't be Sophy's secret lover. Or could he be both? On second thought, he might be. Probably he had just played upon the vanity of that weak fool of a Sophy. There were men like that, and Piers had no good reason to believe that Willie Moppet wasn't one of them.

He himself, however, would come out of the affair looking smaller than he liked to think he was, if in running Moppet to earth he, at the same time, betrayed his own shortcomings. It wouldn't sound at all pretty if Miss Claire came into it, and the story of a burglar who made his confession with a bottle of dredged wine. Everybody would laugh, and of them all, Piers feared most the laugh of Lilla Brant: he feared it more than Sophy's scorn.

So while Piers grinned ferociously at this, he explained all the time he was wondering just how far he dared go, and if it were really wise to call upon the police.

Willie was literally sweating. Last night's lark had proved more futile than such things ordinarily do, and might have an unpleasant side effect.

So, of course, the rope ladder could be explained, but never or never could he explain that he'd eventually find himself in jail. However, well, it hadn't come to that pass yet. Still, he was a friend and inviting him to come along to the prefecture of police.

Willie tried to laugh, but it was a dismal effort. He also made a few indecorous remarks in which the word "joke" occurred a couple of times, and he even insinuated that Bordighera might harbor a branch of The Black Hand. People who, under cover of last night's carnival, had inaugurated a treasure hunt.

But this last was too much for Piers who had lost amongst other things a pet regard, and a picture that he'd regard as his most precious. He said, "Well, I've got these things then they should expect to be treated as such and while a joke is all right in its way, there's a point beyond which it can be carried and still retain the privilege of calling itself a joke."

It was rather unfortunate that Willie had his sang froid had deserted him, for Piers saw through it at once and was quick enough to take advantage.

"You come along with me," he said, with all of the insinuating grimness of a policeman.

And as the insinuating saying is, Willie came quietly. But it was not to the prefecture, after all; it was up the hill once more to the Villa Moppet. Piers thought it would be more effective to set the scene there. He wanted Sophy to be present, for one thing, witness to the downfall of the unfortunate Mr. Moppet. The police could be sent for and go over the ground; and Mr. Moppet could explain his rope ladder trick and tell 'em all about Bordighera's Bright Young People.

By this time Piers' headache had vanished and he was almost himself. He had dressed briskly for the walk, whom walking at any time was a labor, while poor Willie Moppet accountably lagged, considering his lightness and long legs and usual celebrity on hills. It seemed to Willie that a loop of that infernal ladder was around his neck and that Piers Tancred was dragging him by it, scaffolded.

The worst of it all, from Willie's point of view, was the sheer stupidity of the thing. The whole town would not only be talking but chuckling, as well, and therefore while Willie had perpetrated a few more or less innocent jokes, he had never been the butt of one, himself.

So the two trudged along and crew more than one comment for the peculiarly detached manner of their progress. Mr. Moppet like a protestant feebly told all the site of that rich and vulgar Mr. Tancred.

At the villa, however, there was a surprise in waiting. The police had arrived without being sent for and were swarming all over the house and garden with their queer little notebooks and a cast of the most self-important. In the name of the master's presence, Strossen was guiding them, and he had led them to various important spots, notably the ash heap where Sophy landed when she got over the wall, and to the place where the coils of rope had been found and the litter of matches and cigar ends.

BRITISH WARSHIPS SENT TO EGYPT

London, May 30.—Three British warships have been ordered to Egyptian ports as a measure of protection for British interests in that country.

Extremists in Egypt who have been endeavoring to create an friendly situation and sentiment which is not warranted by the actual situation are responsible for the British decision to send the warships, it is admitted.

It is admitted that the "unfriendly situation" was created by antagonism against British military officers in Egypt. The British government probably will deliver a note to the Egyptian premier over the situation.

SCHOOL BOARD TO HOLD SHORT SESSION TODAY

A short meeting of the Atlanta school board is slated for this noon beginning at 2 o'clock at the city hall, it was announced Monday night. The session was called as an adjourned meeting of the May board gathering to allocate the second $1,000,000 school bond funds contained in the $8,000,000 bond issue, members declared Monday night, more time for study is needed.

It was pointed out that the session of the board was held last Friday, that Saturday and Sunday was an "off day."

Thus little time has been given to formulate more concrete opinions as to meritorious projects, and that certain members will ask that the meeting be adjourned until the regular session June 14.

Akron, Ohio, May 30.—(AP)—Fifteen silver bags were away to the northeast late today in the national competition in the 1927 American balloon championship, and the personnel of a team to represent the nation in the international Gordon Bennett cup race next September.

It was a great start completed just 20 minutes ahead of schedule and the same from behind a mass of threatening clouds to set the pilots off.

Scarcely a gust of wind was blowing over the field when Colonel De Forest Chandler, of Washington, the starter, walked over to the United States team and said, "Get set, to be put the silver bag on its way."

It was the first to take the air. Promptly at 5 o'clock the time the race was scheduled to start, Lieutenant James Powell, the pilot, and his wife, Major Maurice R. Smith, climbed into the basket when it was away, ascending almost in a vertical line before it struck an air current.

At intervals of less than five minutes the remainder of the balloons took off from the field and none experienced the greatest difficulty.

The Akron balloon team, which had drawn fifteenth position, and was not scheduled to leave until 6:15 o'clock, made its start 20 minutes ahead of time.

LIBERTY GIVEN TO VANDERBILT
AND HIS WIFE

BY JAY ALLEN,
(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and Paris, May 30.—The Paris tribunal, which recently heard the woes of Mrs. Virginia Fair Vanderbilt today granted her a decree of divorce from William Kissam Vanderbilt, II, on the well-known grounds of incompatibility of life.

The judgment actually was signed today and Mrs. Vanderbilt is a free woman, leaving Mr. Vanderbilt free to marry Mrs. Rosamund Lancaster Warburton, a friend of both say he is going to do immediately. However, from the court records it appears which the world's crack divorce court states the cause will be delayed until tomorrow or Thursday.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Vanderbilt is not going into mourning. She appeared at the races yesterday with a distinguished group of friends, including Mr. John Drexel and occupied a table at Ciro's for Monday night.

Mrs. Vanderbilt herself is a guest of his mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at her palace in Rue Monsieur, while Mrs. Warburton is living quietly at the Hotel Plaza Athenee with her mother, Mrs. Warburton.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and her former husband are quite cordial and always smile and shake hands when they meet at Longchamps which they visit regularly Sundays with William Kissam, III, who is a lion of the Franco-American younger set in Paris, accompanying his mother.

Paris, May 30.—(AP)—Captain Lindbergh has departed from France, but honors continue to be conferred on him. At the annual meeting of the French Academy of Sports the highest tributes were paid to his exploit, his name was placed first on the list of candidates for the 1927 grand prize.

The grand prize of 10,000 francs and a gold medal is awarded by the French Academy of Sports for the sportsman who has made the most in France or by a Frenchman abroad likely to result in material, scientific or moral progress for humanity.

Among the recipients of the prize was Captain Peletier Dassy, the Paris-to-Tokio flier.

Covington Sends Flood Relief Fund

Covington, Ga., May 30.—(Special)—The local Red Cross unit of Covington reports through Colonel A. L. Loyd, president, that the second installment of $100 has been forwarded for the benefit of the Mississippi river flood sufferers.

Newsweek, the first $100 was sent within 48 hours after the call came. Besides this contribution the members of the Golden Fleece Lodge, N. G. F. & A. M., have collected a large sum which will be given through the Masonic order. Other local societies and organizations have sent special contributions to this cause.

C. State, school commissioner from the second ward and chairman of a special committee to recommend the type of heating units.

"We have no encounter endless difficulty and no little expense from units installed in the past, and will accept no bid unless a guarantee of service and satisfaction accompanies it," Mr. State said.

Three members of the committee are Dr. R. M. Enhance, superintendent of schools, R. R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business affairs; W. D. Hoffman, chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board, and William Hancock, chairman of the school committee of the Atlanta bond commission, who will act in an advisory capacity.

Father To Give Own Daughter Her Diploma

It is seldom that a member of the Atlanta board of education has the distinction of presenting a diploma to one of his own children, but that is just what George W. Powell, commissioner from the ninth ward, will do Wednesday night. His daughter, Elizabeth, a graduate from Girls' High school, and Mr. Powell will be selected by the board to deliver the testimonial of scholarship in behalf of the board.

Last year William C. State, commissioner from the second, presented a diploma to one of his daughters, who incidentally is named Evelyn, when the Commercial High school graduation exercises took place.

Miss Powell is a twin of George W. Powell, Jr., and has been one of the most popular students of Girls' High school, is popular in the Red Cross chapter of the school and has been an official in the school bank for the past several months.

Miss State, who completed her course last year, was not employed at a local bank.

Fraternity House Yard Reveals Woman's Bones

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune)

Chicago, Ill., May 30.—University of Chicago authorities and the police were confronted with a new campus mystery today when the new tenants of a former fraternity house discovered a bag of bones beneath the floor of the back porch. Within the burlap sack and not yet dry, with bits of flesh clinging to them, were bones of a foot, thigh, arm, hand, and pelvis, all presumably the remains of a young woman.

Records of the members of the fraternity were unable to move after three suspicious fires and eight mysterious orgies that brought heated protests from neighbors. It was recalled that a family named Olsders resided in the house before it was taken over by the fraternity.

Near the burlap bag and fiber box containing the bones were found a pistol, a stock and a blank examination book of the University of Chicago bearing the name of Mina Olsder and the date, "September 1922." Records of the university disclose that she was enrolled as a medical student. Efforts are being made to trace her and her family. Neighbors do not recall seeing any of them for more than a year.

THE MEN WHO MADE THE WORLD

THE FOLLOWING NIGHT DRAKE MADE THE FIRST ATTACK. HE PLANNED TO DESTROY FIVE TRADER SHIPS WHICH LAY UNDER THE PROTECTING GUNS OF THE SPANISH AND TO FOLLOW THIS BY STORMING THE TOWN. AT TEN O'CLOCK AT NIGHT, THE ENGLISH MOVED FORWARD IN A FLOTILLA OF SMALL BOATS AND PINNACLES. AS THEY APPROACHED THE SPANISH FRIGATES THEY THREW FIRE BALLS UPON THEM, SETTING THE WHOLE SCENE AGLOW IN THE LURID LIGHT. THE ENGLISH ATTEMPTED TO BOARD THE SHIPS AND THEY FOUGHT THE SPANIARDS IN A HAND TO HAND CONFLICT, BUT MEANTIME THE SPANISH ARTILLERY AND MUSKETEERS SWEEPED THE FLOTILLA WITH A RAIN OF SHOT. THE ENGLISH COULD NOT STAND THIS INEQUAL CONFLICT AND WITH SEVERAL OF THEIR BOATS SINKING AND OTHERS DAMAGED, THEY WITHDREW. THE ATTACK FAILED WITH SEVERE LOSSES.

Sir Francis Drake

By DR. ELLIOTT SHORING, NOTED HISTORIAN

THE BOLD DRAKE WAS UNDAUNTED AND PREPARED FOR A SECOND ATTEMPT FOR THE FOLLOWING DAY. THE SPANISH HAD SUNK FIVE VESSELS TO CLOSE THE HARBOR ENTRANCE BUT THERE WAS STILL SPACE ENOUGH TO GET BETWEEN THESE WRECKS. SO, IN THE AFTERNOON, THE ENGLISH SAILED STRAIGHT TOWARD THIS NARROW ENTRANCE, REALIZING THE ENGLISH PURPOSE. THE SPANISH COMMANDER RUSHED TWO FINE MERCHANTMAN INTO THE REMAINING HARBOR BREACH AND THERE SUNK THEM. THIS WAS EXPENSIVE BUT IT SAVED THE TOWN. THE ENGLISH WERE NOW OBLIGED TO WITHDRAW SO PORTO RICO WITH THE VAST WEALTH OF THE SPANISH GALLEON ESCAPED THE ENGLISH HANDS.
